Who is Vicki Zrajko and what is her role at Empower?

Vicki Zrajko is a Solicitor at Empower Family Law & Mediation. Her published profile says she was admitted in 2021 and has practised exclusively in family law since then. It records a Bachelor of Laws, a Bachelor of Criminology and completion of a Graduate Diploma of Legal Practice at Leo Cussen Centre for Law. The biography describes her approach as practical, solution-focused, compassionate and measured. It says she works closely with clients through separation, parenting arrangements and financial settlements. These published details provide background but do not establish whether she will be allocated to a particular enquiry or what outcome is likely. The firm must first understand the issues, urgency and any conflict before an engagement is confirmed.

What family law matters does Vicki Zrajko work on?

Vicki's profile identifies separation, parenting arrangements and financial settlements as central areas of her work. It also says she regularly drafts and negotiates financial agreements and is experienced in matters involving family violence. Her stated aim is to develop clear, practical outcomes suited to a client's long-term goals. These areas can overlap. A separation may require interim parenting arrangements, financial disclosure, advice about property time limits and attention to immediate safety. A financial agreement has specific legal requirements and may not suit every situation, so both the document and the surrounding advice must be tailored. A consultation allows the relevant facts, existing orders, evidence and deadlines to be reviewed before a pathway is recommended.

How does Vicki Zrajko approach matters involving family violence?

Her biography says clients value her compassionate and measured approach, particularly in family-violence matters. A careful approach begins by identifying immediate danger, any intervention orders, risks to children, safe communication methods and whether the usual negotiation or mediation process is appropriate. Family violence can affect parenting arrangements, disclosure, financial circumstances and the urgency of Court steps. A public profile cannot provide a safety plan or case-specific advice. Tell the firm about violence or coercive control at the first contact so the enquiry can be handled appropriately. Preserve lawful evidence only when it is safe to do so. If a person or child is in immediate danger, call 000. Specialist support and urgent legal processes may be required depending on the circumstances.

How can I arrange an appointment about separation, parenting or a financial agreement?

Vicki's profile lists the firm's telephone number as +61 3 7020 6542 and links to the wider team page. The site states that the first 30 minutes of an initial consultation are free. When making contact, summarise the relationship, separation date, children's current arrangements, financial issues, existing orders or agreements and any approaching deadline. For a proposed financial agreement, explain the stage of the relationship, the assets or risks it is intended to address and whether the other person already has a lawyer. Each party ordinarily needs independent legal advice for a binding agreement. The firm will assess the enquiry and practitioner availability before confirming who will act. Immediate safety concerns should be stated at the outset; call 000 if anyone is in immediate danger.
